Crop Circles Investigated – A Field Trip

Sunday, July 20th 10.30am witnessed the 9th annual gathering of a team of researchers into crop circle phenomena. The party, headed by Lucy Pringle met at the designated rendezvous, Silbury Hill car park, before heading off to a barn, where equipment was set up in order to take a control readings of all participants, which would then be repeated, in the crop circle.

Lucy Pringle is a founder member of the Centre for Crop Circle Studies, and coordinates research into the effects of electromagnetic fields on living systems. She has written a book, 'Crop Circles, the Greatest Mystery of Modern Times', and has appeared on various television programmes, lectured, and written numerous articles. Her website is <https://cropcircles.lucypringle.co.uk/>

At the barn, Roger took Kirlian photographs of my fingertips, with the aid of a laptop, which would photograph the energy field emitted. Meanwhile, Isobel Maxwell-Cade and Peter Staples wired their first guinea pig, to the 'Mind Mirror,' ECG biofeedback equipment, which showed left and right brain activity at the different levels; beta, (normal awake state 14-30 hertz) alpha, (deeply relaxed/dreaming 8-13 hz) theta (sleep and highest level of meditation 4.7 hz) and delta (deep sleep 0.5-4 hz.)

Sheila was using a programme to test homoeopathically, hormone levels and toxicity. My readings showed perfect hormone balance and very low toxicity, 3 on the scale where 7 indicated moderate to high toxicity. Jim, a dowser, said there were different responses between man made circles and the others, and that all true circles have a mathematical signature and a direct correlation to the earth's energy grid system.

After refreshments, with time nipping at our heels, we carried equipment some way to the circle. Before being taped up again to the ECG Mind Mirror, I had chance to explore, and noted a distinct change of energy within the crop circle, this reflected in the test, showing calmer brain activity.

Sheila's homoeopathic biofeedback system indicated change in my thyroid, in fact, it showed thyroid imbalance for everyone. Interestingly enough, everyone's toxicity level remained the same, except mine, which had gone down a notch to 2. Roger now looked hilarious as a couple held a shirt and umbrella over his be-hatted head, to help keep the sun out, whilst he recorded the Kirlian photographs...we have to wait for formal assessment to know what, if any changes occurred. Jim dowsed and got a positive response from his rods, also saying that the central swirl of real crop circle's centre is always off centre, (which it was).

In conclusion, true circles create different energetic signatures than man made ones. As Jim said, they have been recorded for centuries, and there had even been a spate of them in his native Yorkshire in the 1920's. It seems this phenomenon is becoming more prevalent worldwide, so, could they be reflecting our collective consciousness, a way of the earth speaking to us, or our friends from other stellar systems emailing us?
